3rd Year Architecture Scholar

Education Florida A&M University Architecture Charles H. Flowers High School Science and Technology Program: Engineering Track	Profile Summary I was born a creative, leaving traces of my art everywhere I traveled. I cultivated many of my artistic abilities in my early adolescence. As I exit my adolescent years, I am sharpening my technical, social, and material understanding of the world. Throughout my studies, both inside and outside the classroom, I have come to value materials science, human rituals/experiences, world history, and physics. These subjects inspire and shape me as a designer. I seek an opportunity that will expose me to professionalism and leadership, teach me real-world design skills, and allow both the company and me to challenge one another.
Key Skills • Revit • AutoCAD • Adobe Photoshop • Adobe Illustrator • Rhino • Collaborative • Artistic • Mood-boarding • Storytelling	Experience Set Designer Charles Winter Wood Theatre November 2025 - Present As Set Designer I have the creative role of coordinating with the directors to design a space that will bring a production and story to life. I research the time period, mood, and movements or the production to produce sketches and scaled renderings and models of the set. I am learning how to work with a team and a budget to build a visual experience for the audience. Team Member Chick-fil-A June 2023 - May 2025 I work with a team to deliver successful customer satisfaction through Chick-fil-A's mission statement. Engaging in sales, performing in-depth customer hospitality, working under pressure, and working with culinary machinery were essential skills to maintain the quality of the company. Working as a team member, I developed a sense of urgency, learned the importance of effective communication, leadership roles, and having confidence to engage with a variety of guests. Volunteer Big Bend Habitat for Humanity August 2024- May 2025 As a volunteer for the Big Bend, I take on the role of a construction worker. The volunteers are trained to complete tasks such as: building the frame of the house, apply sheathing to the walls, install insulation, and add decorative elements in the interior. Big bend has helped me bridge the gap between the design and construction process. Whilst, also exposing me to the community engagement required to build within cities. High School Intern Washington-Alexandria Architecture Center (WAAC) June 2023 - July 2023 This opportunity, through Virginia Tech's Masters program, introduced me to model-making, collaboration, site analysis, and the routine of an architecture student. Throughout this program I visited firms, meeting with various architects, landscape architects, interior designers in the local D.C., Maryland, and Virginia (DMV) area.

PROFILE

3rd Year Architecture Scholar-

Throughout my college career I have acquired skills that have lead me to be a successfully decorated individual.

I graduated top of my class in both basic training physically and mentally due to my JROTC training as a Captain in high school, and ROTC training as a freshman selected for senior level FTX simulated advanced camp through recognition and referral at FAMU.

I have developed a deeper understanding of drawing methods, and architectural history since being in university with new techniques from each professor with each passing year.

I put my entire self in my work to do the best job I can. Maximum effort is my favorite quality and I present it so it shows in my work.

EXPERIENCE

2025 – 2025	GENSLER CHICAGO Professional Intern During my internship at Gensler Chicago, I supported the Interiors studio by labeling and organizing material finishes in Revit, preparing interior plans, and coordinating physical material samples. I contributed to an active interiors project, collaborated on a group project with fellow interns, and participated in site visits that strengthened my understanding of real-world design workflows.
2024 – 2025	CHICAGO STATE UNIVERSITY Student Intern At Chicago State University, I worked as an intern on a solar-powered, net-zero grocery store project focused on sustainable design and community impact. I presented this work at the University of Chicago South Side Science Fair and competed in the Future City Competition, where my team placed in the top 20 nationally.
2023– 2024	CHICAGO ARCHITECTURE CENTER Teen Fellow As a Teen Fellow at the Chicago Architecture Center, I worked on community-driven design projects, created concept models and drawings, and collaborated with other fellows on a real proposal for Just Roots Urban Garden in Bronzeville. The program strengthened my design skills and deepened my understanding of Chicago's built environment.

In my leaping path of motion, my legs made numerous triangular and hurdle shapes. I wanted to find different types of styles of leaping to include in my model. Hurdles were one of those variations. Using these shapes, I was able to create a model with vaulting, hurdling and stretching motions.

ARC 1302

Professor Rodgers

The site was very open and spacious. This site is used as an entertainment space, so it is essential for the site to be open. In this space, a visible hierarchy was evident. Some of the hierarchy was from its natural landscape, but some portions were man-made. The sitting sections of the audience were like stepping stools, adding hierarchy to the design. The stage was also higher to serve as the most important section of the site. There were two main sections to access the amphitheater through sets, but you can also walk up a hill on the side, near an additional parking lot. There was not much vegetation in this section, except for the grass area, as it needed to be open to allow sound waves from the stage to pass through. This section is typically packed with people on Set Fridays, where they congregate to watch performances. This area is normally untouched on any other day of the week or on Fridays when the events are not happening.

about me

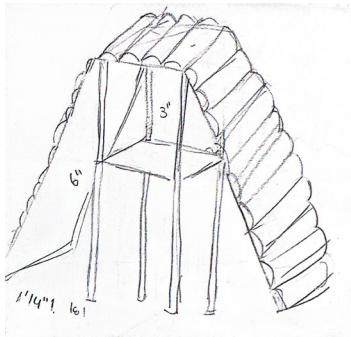

I am Nicollette Watson, a Sophomore Architecture Scholar from Tampa, FL. My goal is to create spaces that make people feel something, whether it's intense or subtle. I believe that architecture is intertwined with the human psyche and emotions. I love taking inspiration from my travels, art, nature, and more.

VERBS CONSTRUCTED

Year Completed: 2025

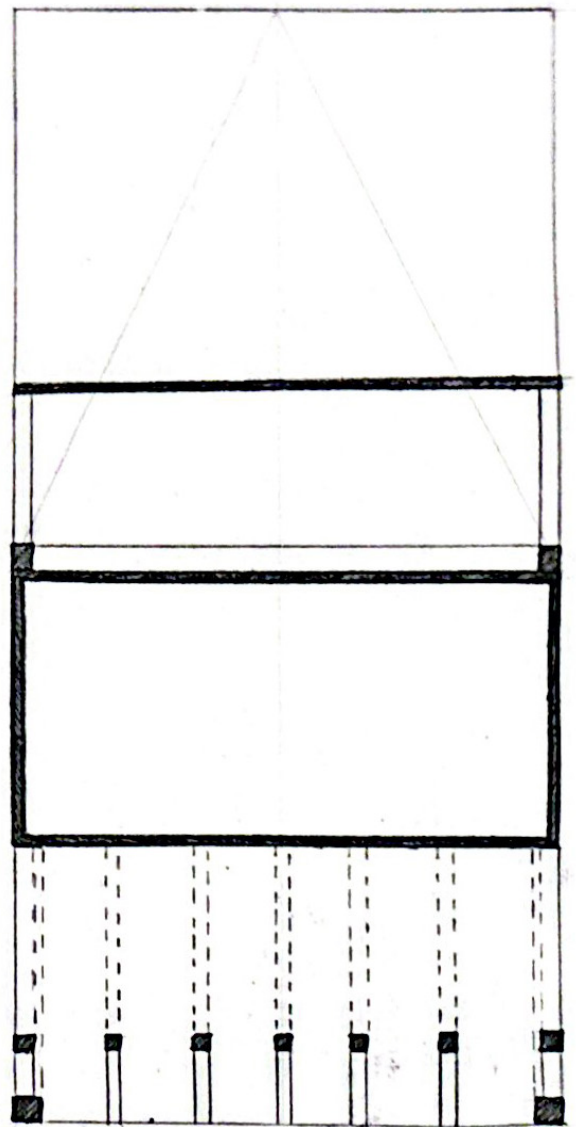

When attempting to translate verbs into structures it's important to keep in mind how the air flows or moves through the space. This principle was the main guiding framework for my process. This project attempts to explain the three verbs: shift, pivot, & stretch in terms of space.

OTTER'S OASIS

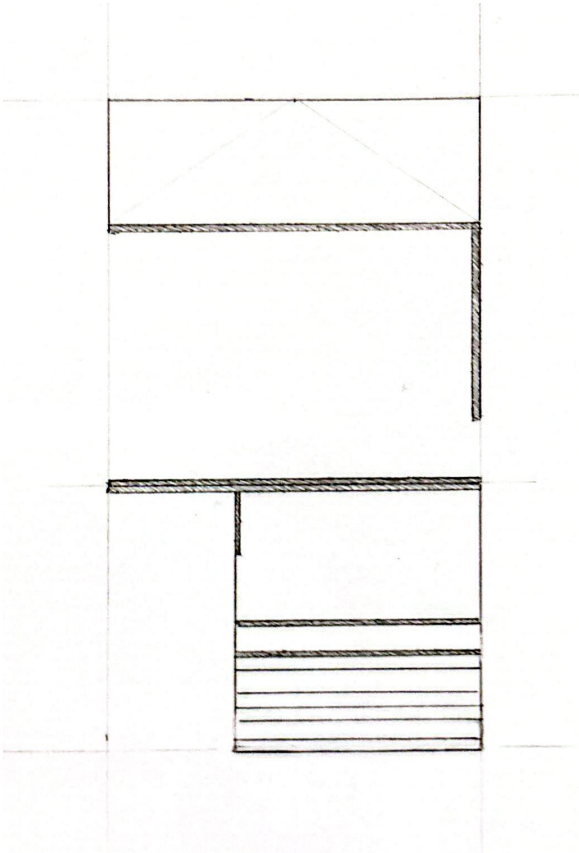

Year Completed: 2025

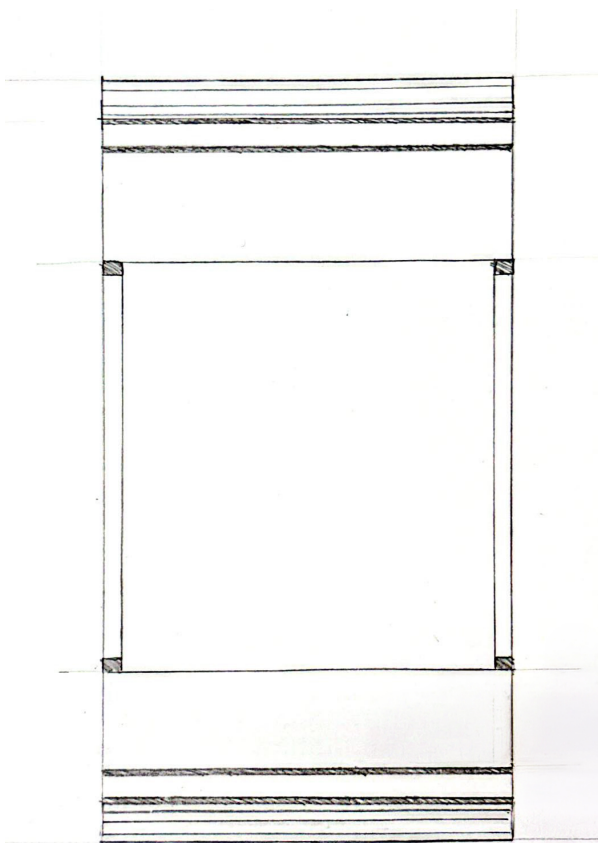

For this assignment we were tasked with creating structures tailored to our chosen animal to be placed in your assigned strip of terrain. I chose an otter because majority of my area was covered in water. Since otters are sociable, playful creatures, I created nodes that would allow for one or more otters to be together. The 1st is a sort of staircase that doubles as an nursery since it's hollow underneath and cuts into the ground creating a small den. The 2nd is a space for relaxation above the water. Finally, the 3rd is meant to act as a communal area featuring spaces both above and below water and logs the sides for climbing.

FINAL MODEL

SENSING SERENITY

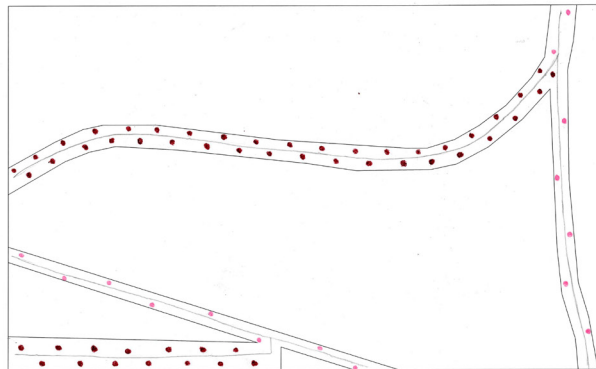

Year Completed: 2026

The basis of this project was picking a site around campus and conducting an analysis of it. The site spans across the whole side of the lake, mainly following a path that we have coined the “Red Brick Road”. At the beginning of the path the marching 100 can usually be heard in the evening hours. There is a lot of wind throughout our site, which makes it extra cold at this time of year. During the warmer months, the sun can be overwhelming in the area, both in brightness and in temperature. Geese frequent the area and can sometimes be heard honking. When spotted it’s usually a pair or more, but rarely one alone. There are many places to sit along the path. Green, metal benches and wooden gazebos are scattered along the site. There are some trees and vegetation, mainly getting denser the nearer they are to the water’s edge. There is also a certain concaveness that can be seen once you’re a bit down the path and looking at the portion of the lake behind you.
