About Me

I am currently a junior at FAMU. I finished my two-year college education and completed my associate degree last year. During this time, I began gaining experience and skills primarily in 3D modeling and graphic design, and most importantly, I developed an understanding of building structures during my most recent semesters. I am a highly motivated student who works hard and wants to learn and gain experience in the field of architecture.

CAREER SUMMARY

As an architecture student and advocate, I lead with purpose, uplifting communities through design, storytelling, and equity. From serving as NOMAS FAMU President to advocating for the preservation of Florida's coast as a Gulf Scholar, I've championed change rooted in cultural awareness. My passion, however, lies in curating and reimagining narratives through storytelling in hospitality, interior design, and creative writing. Beyond architecture, I enjoy writing as a means of relaxation. I'm rather interested in building and playing around with different environments and character archetypes. Blending my passion for design and storytelling, I aim to shape environments, built and imagined, that foster equity, belonging, and joy for those too often overlooked in the world we build.
